Homecare in the US...

According to recent studies, the senior population is the fastest growing population in the world. By the year 2020, one out of five Americans will be a senior. With the senior population increasing dramatically, professional and non-medical agencies providing in-home care for seniors are currently serving less than one percent of all potential clients. That leaves a lot of potential clients for you...99% to be exact.

By 2030, the oldest of the “Baby Boomers” will be 84 years of age while the youngest will be 65. Also by 2030, there will be more than 65 million Americans 65 of older.
This booming population will create a new consumer base for the services of homemaker companions.

Thus, the return on investment in the homemaker companion industry will significantly expand along with its consumer population.
